Organisers left over a barrel due to rain

■ Chloerissa Eadie

HEAVY rain in the lead-up to the 14th annual Bull and Barrel Festival in Dardanup caused the event to be cancelled for the first time.

Festival committee chairwoman Jill Cross said the event was called off because of safety concerns, with flooding to ovals and carparks.

While the cost of the cancellation had not yet been calculated Mrs Cross said it "would be immense".

She said the event would not be moved to another weekend, instead they would look to forward planning next year's festival around the same time of year.

"These things take a lot of planning, it's a 365-day job. Around 15,000 people come and this year we had 180 stall holders booked, the largest number we have had," she said.

"It impacted thousands of people and community groups as this is their big fundraising event for the year. But, we are realistic and the safety of people coming to the event is the priority.

"We have to keep it in perspective as the probability of this happening again next year is low and because of the lighting of the bull sculpture we wouldn't be able to move it to the summer season."

She said they would look at storing the bull sculpture to bring it out next year, as artist Russell Sheridan had put a lot of time and effort into it.

Mrs Cross said it was disappointing they had to cancel the event, but she had already put in a grant application for next year and the committee would consult with sponsors about financial costs incurred.

Bethanie Fields opens its doors for fete

AN auction, face painting and bargain plants are just some of the things on offer at this weekend's Bethanie Fields Fete.

For the 11th straight year, the fete will open its gates to visitors from 8am on Saturday.

The village's clubhouse will be packed with stalls selling a variety of books, clothing and jewellery, as well as lots of well-priced plants.

Bethanie Fields resident Patsy Hills said she enjoyed welcoming visitors into the village but said one of the best things about the day was the Devonshire tea.

"For $3 people can get a coffee or tea and a homemade scone," Mrs Hills said.

Eighteen dozen scones will cater to the visitors along with a sausage sizzle run by the village's tennis club.

The fete is run by the village's residents and Mrs Hills said it had grown in popularity over the years.

"It's a very popular thing, especially the plants," she said.

"Everybody gets involved and it's a complete village function."

Resident David Allen said the fete helped bring both the residents of Bethanie Fields and the wider community together.

"It brings the village together but really, it's the visitors that we love," Mr Allen said.

Mr Allan said the fete was suitable for all ages and in particular, those with a keen eye for a good deal.

"People know they are going to get bargains," he said.
